

State of Mind: Why Can't This Noise

Electropop on an epic scale

Mix a bit of Underworld, some Tangerine Dream, a dash of Aphex Twin, build everything around a classic pop tune and turn the result into one single track - lasting all of 20 minutes. That is the formula for "Why Can't This Noise", the latest release of Danish one man act State of Mind.

"Why Can't This Noise" pays homage to the age of vinyl and the full album side tracks favoured by progressive bands of the seventies - from Kraftwerk's "Autobahn" to Pink Floyd's "Echoes".

"At the core of 'Why Can't This Noise' is a basic song structure, featuring verse, refrain and middle eight," Kim Bonfils explains. "I went to work in the studio trying to create the sound of this song evolving into an improvised jam - all instruments played by myself. I like to think of the result as a journey through vastly different soundscapes."

"Why Can't This Noise" was released November 1 as download only.

- 1. Why Can't This Noise 18:18
- 2. Why Can't This Noise (Radio Edit) 4:33

More details at www.stateofmind.eu

Kim Bonfils can be contacted via mail@stateofmind.eu or by phone +45 60 777 404